

Michael Arman MPIA

Planner

2011

Michael is a Planner with refined research and analytical skills, who strives for a deeper understanding of complex planning issues as the foundation to all his work. At the same time, one of Michael's key strengths is his ability to 'see the wood for the trees' when distilling large volumes of information. This was acknowledged in his recent academic work on the sustainability of Australia's population and the associated planning implications, for which he was awarded first class honours. Michael is another of URPS' great 'all-rounders', contributing to policy development, consultation, NRM, evaluation and community profiling projects. His attention to detail also makes him an excellent development facilitator and assessor.
